FULL BIOGRAPHY

Hartley Charlton is a British writer and editor working where technology and culture converge. He read History at the University of Nottingham, graduating with First Class Honours, and brings the same instincts to journalism: clarity, precision, and an eye for the stories that define the industry. As Senior Editor at MacRumors he has published more than 3,000 articles for a title that reaches tens of millions of readers each month, and has covered every Apple event since 2020. He is a co-host and co-producer of The MacRumors Show, a top 50 technology podcast in the US, Canada, and across Europe. His writing and commentary have appeared on BBC News, Al Jazeera, and CBS, and his original research on British history is published in the peer-reviewed journal Diacronie. As a content creator he produces podcast and short-form video, provides voice-over, and advises organisations on social media and production. He is based in Hertfordshire, England.
